Disaster Recovery Assistance

The Ohio Emergency Management Agency (Ohio EMA) administers grant programs that provide supplemental disaster assistance to local governments, state agencies, and eligible private nonprofit organizations following declared disasters.

Federal Disaster Declaration Process

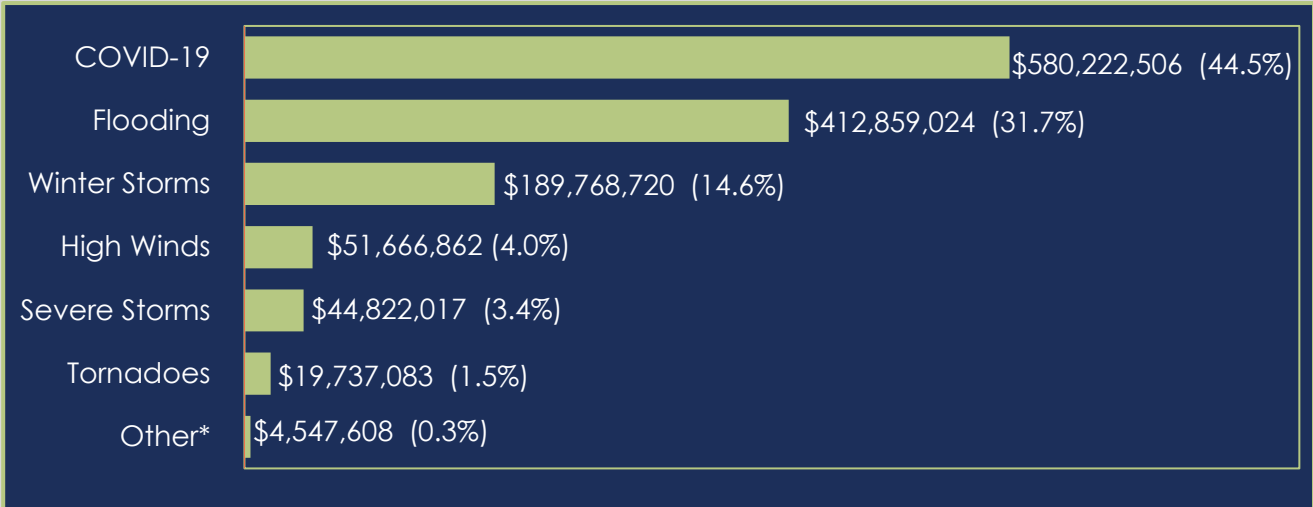

Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) Public Assistance (PA) Grant Program

The FEMA PA Program provides supplemental federal disaster assistance to state and local governments and certain private nonprofit organizations to respond to and recover from major disasters or emergencies declared by the President of the United States. Funding may be used for debris removal, emergency protective measures, and the repair, replacement, or restoration of damaged facilities. The federal share of assistance is at least 75%, with the state determining how the nonfederal share is split with an applicant. Ohio's first PA Program declaration occurred in 1964, but costs were not tracked by the Ohio EMA until 1990.

1990 through 2024

FEMA PA Program Spending by Type of Event

There have been 28 Presidential declarations in Ohio since 1990

On average, the federal share has covered approximately 86% of Ohio's FEMA PA funding since 1990

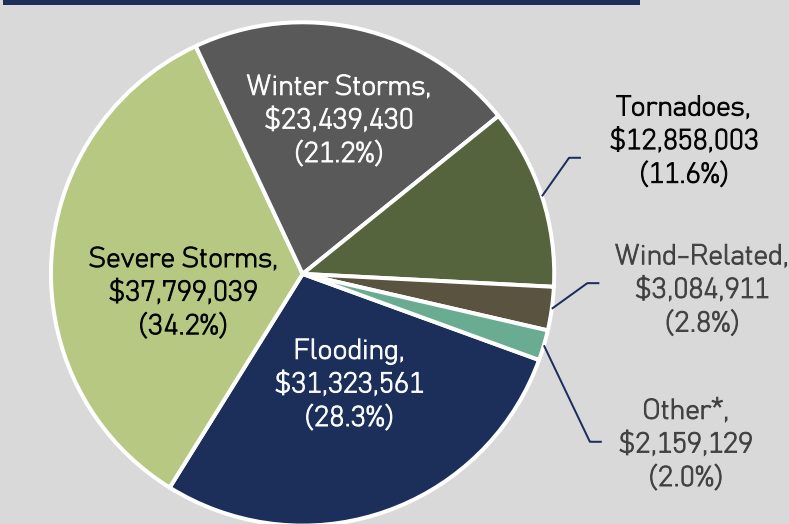

*Includes the 2003 Ohio power outage and assistance for Hurricane Katrina evacuees sent to Ohio in 2005 by the American Red Cross.

State Disaster Relief Program (SDRP)

The SDRP, originally established in 1985, is a state funded reimbursement program that provides supplemental assistance to local governments and certain nonprofit organizations impacted by disasters that are not declared by the President of the United States. The SDRP is implemented following the Governor's written authorization and requires State Controlling Board approval. Eligible expenses include costs associated with debris removal, emergency protective measures, and permanent work. To be eligible for SDRP assistance, a county's damage must meet a countywide per capita indicator. Assistance is cost-shared between the Ohio EMA and the recipient.
